How to develop an effective mobile marketing strategy

Main Street Spotlight

As with every aspect of our economy, we live in a world of constant and rapid change. Responding to trends that directly impact our Main Street is essential to our survival and success. In his post-great recession bestselling book The Great Reset, author Richard Florida made two predictions I believe directly impact Main Street communities across the country. ## South Bend addresses neighborhood traffic calming

To address recurring, dangerous speeding problems on neighborhood streets, the City of South Bend launched a demonstration project to test out traffic-calming tools they had never used before including traffic circles and bump outs. They worked closely with the local community to decide where these traffic-calming strategies were most needed. They also added educational signs to help teach people how street design can improve safety by encouraging drivers to slow down while simultaneously creating more vibrant places for people.

As a result of this demonstration project, drivers drove slower on these streets, and South Bend also built trust with the community. To replicate the success of this project elsewhere, South Bend will develop a toolkit based on this experience to launch additional traffic calming projects in other neighborhoods throughout the city to improve safety and convenience for people on foot or bike.

Dillsboro creates a Veterans Walk

Last year, the Town of Dillsboro initiated a Veterans Walk in conjunction with the town's Heritage Festival. The town has a reputation for honoring veterans, through annual Veterans Day programs, Memorial Day services, honorary dinners and the "flying of colors". The walk contains 214 veterans on sturdy coroplast signs. Veterans from the surrounding area who submit their service information are featured on a 20" x 30" sign (as shown above) along the trail. The walk is displayed during the fall Heritage Festival along the community park walking trail. It was previously displayed in Oakdale Cemetery for the Memorial Day weekend and continues to grow during each holiday.
